Troy Man Suicides In His Auto

Body of Kilpatrick Is Found In Front Of Relative's Home

ACT FOLLOWED TALK TO WIFE

Charge Of Buckshot Enters Heart And Death Results

TROY, Ala., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Head and arms dangling from his automobile and his clothing in flames, the body of Dock Kilpatrick was found early today in front of the home of his father-in-law, T. L. Houston, near Banks.

Kilpatrick is said to have killed himself after calling goodbye to his wife, who was at her father's home. Kilpatrick, who was 26 years old and, until two weeks ago an employee of the state highway department in this county, had been drinking, Mr. Houston stated.

A single barreled shot gun was used in the alleged suicide and the youth had probably pulled the trigger with his coat. One shoe had been removed.

The charge of buckshot entered the heart and death was instantaneous. The explosion had set fire to his clothing and it was blazing at the time the Houstons found the body. The fire was extinguished and the body was left as it was found—half dangling from the car—until the arrival of Sheriff Carroll.

The roadster had been hired Wednesday morning and driven constantly since, it was stated.

Kilpatrick went to the Houston home about three a. m. today and called his wife to a window. They talked for a while and he left. After he returned called her to the window again, and told her goodbye. The report of the shotgun followed a short time afterward.

The handling of 800 tons of coal daily will be tied up temporarily. The cause of the fire had not been determined.

FAR REACHING ROAD EDICT RENDERED IN LOCAL CASE

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 14.—(AP)—One of the most vexing and serious predicaments in which a motorist can, and often-times does find himself when driving in the open country was solved as to its legal aspects in a decision rendered by the Alabama supreme court today in the case of Ezra Jones vs. J. O. Colvard, appealed from the Morgan circuit court.

The decision affirms judgment for $600 damages, awarded Colvard in the trial court in his suit against Jones.

The evidence was to the effect that Jones and Colvard were driving their automobiles on the public highway and that Jones, in an effort to pass the other car, drove so close to the car driven by Colvard that Colvard had to veer result that he drove into a ditch bordering the highway, was himself injured and his car damaged.

It was held by the supreme court that if Colvard was forced to drive too close to the edge of the ditch, that under the evidence in the case Colvard could not be held responsible for the accident which ensued. The duty of the machine in front to turn to the right depends on circumstances, the court ruled.

It was also ruled that if the machine in front is already as far over toward the right margin of the road as it can be safely driven, it needs no argument to show that the driver in the rear car cannot require or expect it to turn further to the right.

Concluding the opinion of the supreme court in the case, which was written by Justice A. D. Sayre "rules governing the use of highways impose care upon the drivers of vehicles for the benefit of others and, in proper cases, punitive damages are allowed as a means of imposing such rule."

In the case of Troy Watts vs. the state, appealed from the Tuscaloosa circuit court, the supreme court in another decision upheld the validity of the act creating the county court of Tuscaloosa county.

Center Of Gravity To Be Central Again Late This Week

SANTA CLARA, Calif., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Storms of "attenuated" intensity are forecast for October 15 and 16 by Father J. S. Rickard, director of the observatory of the University of Santa Clara.

Calling attention to the journey across the sun's disk of the giant sun-spot group, first observed at the university September 13, Father Rickard said:

"That famous group was first seen at the observatory of the University September 13. After that it was observed every day until its final disappearance on September 25. When it became central, storms, hurricanes, floods and earthquakes were raging on various parts of the world. Its center of gravity will again be central on October 15-16, when storms of attenuated intensity will recur. The spots already have reappeared."

Incorporation Papers Filed Here In The Probate Court

HARRIS HEADS THE COMPANY

High Grade Product To Be Made, Says Announcement

Articles of incorporation have been filed in probate court here for the Farmers Fertilizer company, a $30,000 corporation which will begin erection of a plant immediately near the Ferry street landing on the banks of the Tennessee river.

Erection of the plant is not expected to require many weeks and those behind the project hope to begin the actual manufacture of fertilizer in a comparatively short time.

Officers of the new company include: R. N. Harris, president; F. E. Taylor, vice president. The incorporators are: R. N. Harris, F. E. Taylor, John W. Knight, Charles H. Eyster and H. D. Bynum. All of the members of the new company are well known business men of the Twin Cities and of Courtland, and their friends predicted much success for them in their new undertaking.

In announcing the new company, Mr. Taylor also announced the severance of his connection with the Decatur Mill and Elevator company. He expressed his regret at this detail and thanked his friends for the business they have given him while he was with that company.

The site for the new company's factory has been obtained and no time will be lost in getting construction of the plant underway. It will be of frame and galvanized iron.

The company will manufacture high grade fertilizers, most adaptable to North Alabama needs, it was stated.

WASP waists are coming back, says fashion. The loose dress conceals a tightly laced corset making the already too thin woman look thinner. England is 'interested' because one young woman, thus secretly tightened, ate heartily and died because nature could not fight against the outrageously tight lacing.

That warning will do no good, if lacing is the fashion. Women take a medicine to make them thin, knowing that it weakens the heart, and eventually causes death.

Empty Mail Sack And Machine Gun Are Found

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Bandits, armed with sawed-off shot guns, held up a mail truck under police escort in the business section this morning and killed one man and wounded two others.

The dead man was John Enz, an employee of the Elizabeth office, who was in charge of the truck. John Quinn, also a postoffice employee, was wounded and Motorcycle Patrolman Christman, who was escorting the truck, was knocked from his machine when one of the bandits' cars collided with him. He was shot as he lay on the ground.

The bandits got away. It is believed there were ten or more in their party. They occupied two automobiles. Postoffice officials were unable to estimate the value of the bandits' loot. The bandits fled toward Newark. Police following the trail, picked up an empty mail sack and also found a machine gun.

EXECUTIVE BODY 'MAPS' PROGRAM OF ENFORCEMENT

Four Million Bales To Be Withdrawn From Market

ACREAGE CUT TO BE ASSURED

Mrs. Edmundson One Of Speakers At The Session

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 14.—(AP)—The executive committee, charged with the task of supervising the cotton relief program approved last midnight by the conference of Southern bankers, merchants and planters, went into session here today to formulate plans for active launching of the two major objectives:

Retirement of 4,000,000 bales of this year's crop and a "reasonable reduction" in cotton acreage for 1927.

Meeting at the call of Dr. Tait Butler, farm economist, Memphis, chairman of the executive group, the supervisors reflected the determined attitude of the convention in its long continued sessions of yesterday and last night, and promised active prosecution of the campaign for meeting the cotton market depression of this year and preventing a recurrence of the price slump in the staple.

Conferring with Dr. Butler were: B. W. Kilgore, North Carolina, and J. W. Fox, of Mississippi, committeemen.

The farmer cannot afford to wait for legislative relief either state or national, in the opinion of Mrs. W. B. Edmundson, only woman among 500 or more delegates at the cotton conference.

"What the grower needs is immediate relief," Mrs. Edmundson said in discussing proposals to meet the emergency created by market depression. "I favor the legislative plan in principle, but we must have an earlier solution than that means affords."

Appointed from Alabama, Mrs. Edmundson's holdings are in Morgan county, the northern part of the state. She was a member of the committee on resolutions.

"I think Governor Brandon sent me up here because he wanted real farmer in the delegation," Mrs. Edmundson said. "I get so tired of the advice these 'side-walk' farmers hand out."

Mrs. Edmundson placed responsibility for the size of cotton acreage on the bankers and supply merchants.

"I never went to a banker for a loan," she explained, "without having him say to me: 'Now, Mrs. Edmundson, can't you plant just a few more acres in cotton this year?'"

"The solution lies in the hands of the farmer and the banker together."

Miss Margaret Bauer Writes of The Completion of The Erie Barge Canal

Writing today from Buffalo, N. Y., Miss Margaret Bauer called attention to the celebration of a local project which has become national in its scope. Miss Bauer wrote of the celebration upon the anniversary of the opening of the Erie Canal, as follows: "It is my privilege to write to you, informing you of the one hundred and first anniversary of an achievement to be celebrated on October 14. It is a holiday to commemorate the completion of the Erie Barge Canal. The celebration a century ago was conducted in an elaborate fashion, the chief feature was the firing of a cannon, stationed along the water route from Buffalo to New York. A cask of water from the Atlantic ocean was poured into the waters of the Erie Barge Canal. Much the same celebration will occur this occasion. The building of the Erie Canal is known to be the pioneer engineering feat in America, the first grade of sod was lifted in 1817 and the Canal was completed in 1825 at a cost of $7,000,000, on October 26. The original was small, being only 40 feet wide, at the top, and 28 feet at the bottom and being four feet deep. In later years additions and improvements were made so that it can now accommodate vessels carrying from 2,000 to 3,000 tons. This canal has not only benefited us to an enormous extent, but has benefited the western states, although they do not appreciate his fact. It has made the city of Buffalo the greatest grain port in the country. We all appreciate the fact that New York state is called the "Empire State" of the Union, but it has only encouraged immigration and importation from the western states to the east, thereby accelerating their development. The states bordering the Great Lakes do not seem to realize the fact that the Erie Canal is the cheapest means of transportation and that it quickens their trade with the east. It is not, therefore, the Erie Canal to be regarded and preserved as a national and not a local heritage? Very respectfully yours, (Miss) MARGARET BAUER. The letter from Miss Bauer brings to mind the proposed Great Lake development and the ultimate development of all southern rivers, a tremendous project upon which great engineering and far seeing minds are now employed. The Erie Canal is the forerunner of just such work.

OVERHEAD IN SCHOOLS

This is the third of a series of articles on overhead cost in the schools by R. W. Cowart, Secretary of the Alabama Education Association. R. W. Cowart, Secretary of the Alabama Education Association, said: "Overhead in the schools is not essentially different from overhead in other fields of work. Without exception, within my knowledge, all businesses of any consequence invest a considerable portion of their operating costs in overhead. If good business men consider their expenditure a wise investment for their businesses, would it not be folly to expect so large a concern as a county or city school system to operate successfully without a similar expense? The antagonist of overhead expense in the schools claims that this money could be used to lengthen school terms so badly needed. It is true that the terms could be lengthened some if overhead money were released for that purpose. Business houses could increase their stock too or make other investments by diverting their overhead costs, but they do not. "How much could terms be lengthened? If all overhead for public elementary and high schools were abolished, the sum $522,000 approximately, would purchase about six more days of schooling a year. If the cost of supervisors, not generally looked upon as overhead cost which amounts to approximately $150,000 annually, were released for lengthening the term, a little over one and a half days per year could be added. This last item is not an expenditure in all counties as only thirty-one counties and a few cities have supervisors. "The cost of the State Department of Education is an overhead expense serving the whole school system. This amounts to about $128,000 per year and is paid by the state with the aid of certain philanthropic agencies. If this fund could be released for lengthening terms, only one and a half days could be added. "Taking the whole sum spent for county and city superintendents' offices, the state department of education, and the cost of supervisors ($794,575) and applying it to lengthening of school terms,

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and in its germ growth. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

PALE & PEAKED

Texas Lady Was Advised By Her Mother To Take Cardui, Which She Did With Good Results.

Hamilton, Texas.—Mrs. Gladys Poitevin, of this city, says: "At times I suffered awfully with pains across my back and through my sides. I would have to go to bed and stay two or three days at a time. It was very worrisome. I managed to keep going, but... I did not enjoy myself at all. "One day my mother remarked on how bad I looked. She said: 'You look so pale and peaked, why don't you take a bottle of Cardui?' She had taken it herself a number of times, and it had always improved her health, so she thought I had better try it. "I got the Cardui and began taking it, and from the first dose or two I could see a change for the better. The first thing I noticed was that my appetite was improved. I began to be hungry and I enjoyed my meals. I slept better at night. My rest was so much quieter that I got the benefit from it. I kept on with the Cardui and took it for several months. The pains in my back and sides grew less until they finally quit bothering me. "Try Cardui for your case. At all drug stores. NC-170

FOX HUNTERS AND COON HUNTERS MUST HAVE THEIR LICENSES.

Fox, coon and possum hunters must have their licenses for "night hunting" in Alabama, the same as the hunters of quail and other game. This is the warning issued to the people of the Tennessee Valley by C. M. Harwell, district game warden, who was a Twin City visitor Wednesday.

"We do not want to interfere with the pleasure of hunters, nor do we want to be put in the attitude of hounding them," he declared, "but the attorney general has given us a clear interpretation of the law for us to follow and we have no alternative but to enforce that law as he interprets it."

Under the administration of Commissioner Quinn and of deputies like Mr. Harwell, the state conservation work has won many friends. The department insists that the law be enforced, but such is the courtesy of the workers, that respect for the law has been increased among the people generally.

The warning was given by Deputy Harwell not because he wished to worry hunters, but in the belief that there are many persons who are not familiar with the provisions of the law and in the hope that someone may take advantage of the warning and prevent trouble.

"BURN A BALE" OF COTTON PLAN WILL NOT BRING SETTLEMENT.

Certain Southern farmers have launched a "Burn a Bale" plan to replace the "Buy a Bale" movement, inaugurated more than twelve years ago, when the price of cotton dropped to five cents a pound.

This new plan gives no more indication of being a success than did its predecessor. In fact the "Burn a Bale" plan does not even hold forth as much promise of success, because it is fundamentally unsound. Destructive measures never were conducive to permanent settlement of a problem, and certainly the "Burn a Bale" idea is destructive enough.

A local merchant today was describing some of his experiences with the "Buy a Bale" movement. Like other patriotic citizens, he declared, he joined the effort to do something for relief of the farmers in their financial distress. His was a "never again" attitude.

"The buy a bale movement was just getting underway," he asserted, "and I joined in. I decided to buy a bale of cotton and pay ten cents for it in the hope that my act and similar acts of thousands of others might relieve the situation. I called one of my good customers and told him to bring me a bale. He did and I gave him a check. I lost a good customer then and there. I never knew what it was, but evidently something about the transaction was displeasing to him, for it was rare he was ever in my store afterwards."

If The Daily thought for a minute that the "Buy a Bale" or the "Burn a Bale" plan offered any lasting benefits, it would be one of the first agencies to sponsor one or the other, but this newspaper cannot believe that either would help.

The necessary thing is that next year's acreage must be reduced. Some plan may be formed to getting a better price for this year's product. If such is the case, it will mean that ample credit facilities have been provided for extending credit to holders of their 1926 crop.

This is a problematical question, but there is every reason to believe that a reduction of at least 25 per cent in acreage in 1927 will bring about a much higher price. This is a condition, however, which the farmers, themselves, must be most instrumental in bringing about.

The bankers can advise acreage reductions, but it must be the farmers who make such reductions. Less acreage in cotton was advised this year. The Daily, on numerous occasions, printed the warnings from various farm experts and published considerable editorial comment, urging the farmers of Morgan and neighboring counties not to bank too heavily on cotton as their major cash crop. There was every indication that the acreage planted would be large this year, and, considering the carry-over, there was every reason to believe, if conditions of growth were good, that another big crop would result, with resultant lowering of price. Farm leaders urged acreage reductions, but planters generally paid little heed to these. A big crop was planted, a big crop was grown, and a small price is the logical and the natural result.

Next year, the farmers of the South will have a new opportunity. If they have profited by their mistake of 1926, the agricultural year of 1927 should be a banner one. If they have failed to profit by the mistake, serious financial depression is certain to follow.

can statesman will find it necessary to send our men to that fight, or finance it, as it goes along. Once was enough.

SOME DAY, says a London publication, death certificates will tell the truth, for instance: "Died after thirty years of overwork," "smothered to death, worked, lived and slept in unventilated rooms." Poisoned by his wife, she did not know how to cook."

TO millions of death certificates might be added, "Died at the top. His brains never taught to work, gradually dried up." In America, big life insurance companies, that pay bills for millions of funerals, fight foolish living and death very ably, with advertising and free advice.

THE bishop of Liverpool and "Gloomy" Dean Inge agree that Christians no longer fear or believe in eternal punishment.

The dean says Christianity has given up the "eternal torment" belief during the past 75 years, and adds, "it is strange men ever believed that God, whom Christ came to reveal, is an implacable torturer."

The old colored brother looked at it practically: "I don't believe in fire and brimstone lasting forever, because I don't believe no constitution could stand it."

Those that mourn the loss of an omnipotent being, creating miserable, imperfect creatures, then torturing them with fire for billions of years, may find comfort in the fact that things really worth while are not done through fear. Absence of fear make them possible.

HAMILTON FYFE, able British editor, is here to tell us about it.

France, an independent agricultural nation, will never pay us a cent, and doesn't care what Uncle Sam does about it.

Germany, depending on trade, will continue to pay something with part of the money she is borrowing from us now, and will gradually cut payments to nothing.

Britain is sorry the gold standard was restored and sorry arrangement was made to pay us part.

THE one able man in Britain's government, according to Mr. Fyfe, is Winston Churchill. It is interesting to remember that he got his intelligence from an American mother, daughter of a itorially: "The Catholic church does nothing of the kind. Political topics are never discussed in Catholic churches. No priest would so far forget himself as to tell people how they should vote."

If, however, a candidate were opposed, for nomination or election, because of his being a Catholic, Jew or Protestant, would not the clergy of the different religions be justified in mentioning the fact?

THE English are concentrating on alliterative sentences, in place of word puzzles. "Alliteration's Artful Aid" can be used to advantage often. And to develop knowledge of language the alliteration craze is more useful than the word puzzle.

TO select words for yourself is better than puzzling over words selected by another. May children have tried to repeat rapidly, "shoes and socks shock Susan." The administration, which will soon be asking farmers' votes, might think over this run of words, "Cotton, corn, crops, crisis."

OUR immigration laws keep out the best men and women of Europe—enterprising, ambitious people that would like to come.

International smuggling bands are bringing in the worst kind of foreign population, those whose coming is based on crime and deception, men without wives or children, breaking into this country across the Mexican border, as thieves break out of jail.

Eight thousand foreigners are said to be in Mexico now, waiting to be brought in.

It would be better to select the right kind of Europe and admit them openly.

The little guests were invited to play with him from 2 to 5 p. m. at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. W. L. Hall on East Moulton street. Mrs. Winton contributed a very interesting and instructive paper on "The Roman Empire." Miss Elizabeth Hutson delighted her hearers with a piano number and Master Billy Day entertained the club with a group of readings.

During the social hour, the hostess served an ice course.

The table was spread in the conservatory which was tastefully decorated, vases and baskets of velvet flowers being used; the Halloween colors, a large birthday cake adorned the center with baskets of fruits and candies. Delicious sandwiches and cake with tea and chocolate were served the guests. Tiny Halloween basket flowers with candies were placed at each plate. Six of her girl friends enjoyed the occasion. Many presents were received, the afternoon was greatly enjoyed by all.

Export System Of Red Russia Causes Losses On Grain Shipments

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW—Disastrous results of the Soviet system of exporting grain are revealed in a report on foreign trade just issued here by the Collegium of the Commissariat of Workers and Peasants Inspection.

Instead of making a profit on its exports of grains, the Soviet Union actually lost 13,900,000 rubles, or $7,000,000 during the year just closing, from October 1, 1925 to October 1, 1926.

The Commissariat reports that "In general the export for 1925-26 was unprofitable."

In its analysis of the causes of the unprofitability of the Soviet foreign trade operations, the Commissariat throws an interesting light on the difficulties of administering efficiently an immense apparatus in which is concentrated all the functions of buying, selling, shipping and financing ordinarily carried out by hundreds of different firms in "capitalist" countries.

Exports Unsatisfactory
First of all the Commissariat declares that "exports were unsatisfactory due to the fault of the Commissariat of Trade." This is a slap at the recently deposed L. B. Kamehoy, one of the leaders of the opposition to the Company Central Committee.

Specifically, reports the Commissariat "The causes for our losses were the extraordinary overhead expenses, the high cost of foreign financing, the inefficient maneuvering and failure to co-operate of the export agencies, and the unfavorable relationship of domestic grain prices to the prices of grain on foreign markets."

The Commissariat reports that overhead expenses alone cost the government from 40 to 60 per cent of the price paid the peasants for their grain. By the time the grain reached the foreign consumer it had already cost the government in many cases more than the consumer could pay.

Below Estimates

For the first three quarters of the fiscal year 1925-26 total exports amounted to only 498,400,000 rubles, instead of 720,000,000 rubles as planned at the beginning of the year. The decrease, amounting to one-third reduction of the plan, resulted in a passive foreign trade balance of 84,577,000 rubles, and became the corner stone of the present economic crisis in which the Soviet Union finds itself. Even after the first plan was revised, exports failed by 11 per cent to come up to the revised plan.

On the import side, the Commissariat established the fact that the government weakening before the immense goods-hunger of the country, used up virtually its entire import allotments for the whole year during the first six months. Imports gathered such a momentum that before they could be checked the government found itself before a passive balance. Imports totalled 577,077,000 rubles for the first three-quarters of 1925-26.

Back of all the immediate causes for failure of the government's export plan is the stubborn refusal of the peasants to sell their grain. They will not sell because they can buy nothing with their money. The famine of manufactured articles extends to every commodity required by the peasant.

The government again this year in mid-autumn has failed by

KILL PEACH TREE BORERS NOW

J. C. Ford, County Agent.

Now is the time to rid peach trees of borers by use of paradichlorobenzene. Apply it between now and October 25, the sooner the better.

This material can be bought from some, if not all, local drug stores.

Smooth the ground around each tree, leaving it firm. Use about one ounce to a good sized tree, and correspondingly less to small trees. Place it in a circle 2-12 inches from the tree and about one inch wide. Bank dirt on it in cone shape, and firm it with the back of the shovel. Leave it there for four weeks and then level it down. This remedy is cheap and effective and should not be neglected.

Love Goes Adventuring in—
PARADISE by COSMO HAMILTON
Author of SCANDAL & BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE
Published by arrangement with First National Pictures

Telling his boatmen to remain where he was until some one was sent to help him with the bags, Quex gave a very necessary hitch to his reckless trousers and led the way to the village. "You won't be far from the wall," he said, still playing his usual game of tact, though he felt unconsciously like the spider inviting unsuspecting flies into his parlor. "My old Dad took blinkin' good care ter build 'is 'ouse on the best spot—as I think you'll agree when yer sees it."

Beneath a roof of palms the alley was smoothed and, weeded. Plants grew here and there. Dusky butts clustered in the shadow, and to the primitive veranda of these men, women and children came out to gaze in round-eyed wonder, the men naked but for the official loin cloth, the women in the precarious loto-loto of tappa, which encircled their ample waists, the children "clothed on in chastity."

"The 'and of the blinkin' mission'ry," said Quex. With a satirical jerk of his pith helmet, he indicated a small building at the end of the alley with two pointed towers, each surmounted with a cross. Mosses and lichens, mosaics of many shades of green, faint touches of red and yellow mould covered the decaying walls. "We turn off 'ere," he added, wheeling to the right, "where you'll rub yer eyes and see the house that Bill built, the show place of Paradise." There was a strong note of pride and affection in his voice, as well there might have been.

It was not a hut or a shack at which they looked, but a villa large and comfortable, strongly and firmly built with logs, one-storeyed. It was true, but with a veranda front and back, a thatched roof, set down in an oblong enclosure covered with clinkers of smashed coral, where coconuts and I mullets and the trees flourished. A pergola of bananas led from the wicket gate to the front veranda. At the back a bulwark of uncut coral, like an Irish wall, enclosed the place from the rampartous bush. A wide opening gave a sudden and breath-taking view of the blue lagoon. The roar and wash of the sea overcame all other sounds. It was a dramatic and an enchanting spot.

"There y' are," said Bill Quex. "Wot price that ter a little bit of or' right?"

He jerked the gate open, once more removed his old pith helmet in a sweeping bow and showed his bankrupt teeth in a gleeful grin.

And as he did to the person to whom he had referred briefly in his talk to Sherwood—"baccy, booze and a girl"—came out and jelled against the door in a frock of creamy yellow. Her oval face made all the whiter by the contrast of her jet-black, swarmed-down hair, dark Semite eyes and beet-red lips, she stood with one foot crossed over the other and her hands upon her hips.

The snarling word she got from Quex were, "Go on in an 'ide."

"How perfectly corking," said Tony, standing in the sitting room. "By jove, one easily might be in—I dunno, Calcutta, perhaps, or Egypt. Not that I know those places."

Bill Quex was flattered. "Yee mean yer never expected ter find anything like this 'ere on a South Sea Island, eh?"

"Yes. Did you, Chris?"

"I don't think I did," she said, all the more amazed at the brightness and cleanliness of everything when she glanced again at the unkempt owner of the house.

"Well," said Quex, in high good humour, "I'll tell yer 'ow it is. Before my old father turned up 'is tradin' business 'e was livin' in Apia, in one of them shacks near Government 'ouse. Things had gone agin' 'im, and 'e was that darn on 'is luck 'e were precious 'lad fer ter take that job yer father offered 'im of lookin' arter this. So, bein' a religious man and all like that, what 'old ter weedin' rings and sich, he arsted ther widder of a tramp steamer Captn, wot 'ad died on the way aginst, ter be 'is wife and share 'is lot on Paradise. This she did, and gladly 'e were a fine lookin' man—an' ther two of 'em come over and built this place with lovin' care, meanin' ter spend ther rest of ther days in appiness and comfort. Me mother was used ter nice things and was a proper 'ousewife, and bit by bit she sends to San Francisco fer the furniture and fittin's, same as yer see. All this 'ere wicker furniture come over on the tramp fer first 'ushand croaked on. Made in Japan, it was; wear fer ever, it will. Tables and pictures and the bedroom stuff, which is a treat. They all come from Frisco too. And ther books; though my old man made the shelves, and that there desk, which nobody never used. These 'ere rugs the natives made—ther women; it's part of ther game. Not to bad, neither. And out of respect for the old couple, and because 'er blinkin' fond of the place, I sees that my people keeps it clean and all fiked up, just as it were in the old days when I were a nipper, farkin' round. That's the idea, y' see. And of course, I ain't allers in this 'ere dish-ebrill. Oh, no! I lopped over to Apia on a sudden 'unch and these is me workin' clothes."

Chris laughed. This remark, in the familiar accent of a Tube conductor, warmed her heart. Gross, brutal and dirty as their new friend was, he evidently possessed the saving grace of humour, which was good.

Tony sprang to his feet and waved his cap at the island which, at last, had become an actual fact.

Quex hauled the towed rowboat alongside. The baggage had been left in her. And then he turned his face to Chris with what he considered was a most bewitching smile. "Ladies first," he said.

Tony, bareheaded because this lady was a Queen, helped her into the boat of ancient ribs, and presently out upon the coral steps of the pier, and then he said, in a low and quite steady voice, "Welcome home, Your Majesty."

A pair of chiffon legs had been trying for ten minutes to get her boy friend, a bank teller, on the telephone. Giving it up, she burst from the booth with her afternoon complexion fretted by a frown. Joining her girl friend on a hotel balcony, she complained:

"I can't even raise the bank. Must be a holiday of some kind." It was. It was Thanksgiving day.

No matter how hard you wash the outside of your hand the dirt on the inside will still be there!

In Arcady. There magic fills (I've simply got to pay these bills)

The nights; cash liquid hour (I'll bet that bowl of milk is sour!)

Dripe red-o-ness. Soft zephyrs tell (I wish those kids were— hear them yell!)

Of sylvan glades and meadows where

(That noise would make Saint Peter swear!)

Moon maidens dance with twinkling feet

(Oh, for a good square meal to eat!)

In Arcady, the saffron dawn

(I haven't got a thing to pawn!)

Steals from the east, the west to rob—

Final Touches Added by Coaches As Moulton And Hartselle Come Friday

Coaches Alford and Kirby added final touches to their offensive and defensive powers this afternoon for the pair of games to be played Friday afternoon here. Moulton furnishes the opposition for the Albany high combination while Morgan county high is chosen to put an end to Decatur goal line aspirations.

Neither coach had fully settled upon his lineup for the games up until the afternoon hours and it is possible that quite a shakeup is due in both camps before the lineup is announced for the Friday duo of tilts.

Indications at present point to two of the largest crowds in local gridiron history, students of the two schools being almost as greatly interested in the outcome as the players themselves. Players of each team are promising themselves an afternoon of hard work, they do not mean to let either of the invaders get away without the knowledge that they have been in a football uniform up against something more than a football uniform.

Injuries have halted the Decatur stride somewhat, but a fighting spirit characteristic of all Decatur elevens is expected to overcome the disadvantage. Coach Kirby is not planning his game without an idea of a heavy attack and it is likely that both elevens will turn up with counters before the sunlight goes down on Riverside field.

Coach Alford likewise is looking to considerable scoring talent both on the part of his own boys and the invading Lawrence county legion.

He will not shift the flankmen, holding Sartor and Herman Papenburg to impel the fleet footed lads from just across the roughest road in the state. Tackle positions likely will find Thompson and Jackson performing duty, with Wiggins and Thrasher at the guards. Terry looks like a starter at center. Bishop, Perie Thoms and Henry Papenburg will likely begin the line plunging tactics for the afternoon, with other backfield material held out for the time being.

Both teams are going to take the field at an early hour, so that the game may be started at 3:30 o'clock. Coaches asked today that students and the general public take care to remain off the playing field, thus lessening the dangers of sideline injuries.

SPORTSMEN MUST HAVE 'LICENSES'

Permits From Owner Of Land Also Is Necessary

Warning to all sportsmen that they must have their licenses and that they must have permits from owners of the land on which they are hunting, again was given today by V. M. Harwell, district game warden, who was here on a visit.

The hunters of possums, coons and foxes also must have their licenses and permits, just as hunters of other game, Mr. Harwell warned.

All hunting licenses are delinquent on October 1 and Mr. Harwell urged hunters to renew their licenses, in order to prevent prosecution.

HOME BEAUTIFUL PRIZE AWARDED

Mrs. Tom Billings Is Winner Of Athens Civic Contest

(By D. L. ROSENAU, Jr.)

The prizes in the home beautiful contest sponsored by the Athens Kiwanis club were awarded at regular meeting of the club Wednesday night. The first prize for the residence showing the greatest improvement in the course of the year was given to Mrs. Tom Billings whose home on Coleman Heights has been an object of much attention locally. For the greatest improvement in business property the award was made to A. M. McConnell, local undertaker. Honorable mention in the residential line was given to Mrs. Elice Biles, R. A. Chambers, Winfred Johnson, and C. J. Hayden; in the business section to U. G. White and Col. M. K. Clements. The committee making the awards was composed of R. B. Patton, J. R. Crawford, and A. S. Cutts.

BISHOP DOBBS SPEAKS

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs of Birmingham spoke to one of the largest audiences ever gathered in Athens at an open mass meeting in the auditorium of the First Methodist church Wednesday night. The Bishop spoke in the interest of the half million dollar endowment drive which was launched among Athenians this week, pointing out in his address that in order for Athens College to maintain her present "A" grade rating among colleges she must secure the endowment sought. He eulogized in flowing terms the glorious past of the institution and its present success but emphasized the critical position the college faces in the future if the necessary funds are not obtained.

The entire student body of Athens College were present, occupying a central position; people from all churches were invited and quite a contingent from out of town were attracted by the prominence of the speaker.

The endowment drive opened in earnest in this county this week with personal letter sent out by the President of the institution to local business men, the drive will later spread over the entire state.

15,258 BALES GINNED

15,258 bales of cotton were ginned in Limestone county up to October 1, according to County Statistician John D. Spiegel, as against 19,633 bales up to the same time last year. Between Sept. 16 and Oct. 1, nearly 1,000 bales were ginned per day. As will be seen most of the cotton was ginned after Sept. 15, the gins during this period remaining open day and night. At present the day shift appears sufficient to accommodate all demands, a majority of the crop having been gathered. Quite a number of the larger land owners are said to be holding their product.

STUNT NIGHT AT ATHENS COLLEGE

"Stunt Night" will be observed at Athens College by the Glee Club this Saturday night, a number of comic vaudeville and singing acts being on the program. A small admission fee will be charged to defray expenses.

COLLEGE SORORITIES IN RUSHING SEASON

The sororities at Athens College are creating considerable excitement this week in their rushing activities, the prospective members being rushed to dinners, parties, and auto rides by the old members in an effort to curry favor with the desired girls. As there was approximately a 20 per cent increase in the enrollment this year the problem of selecting new "sisters" is rather perplexing. Four such societies flourish on the campus, and it is probable that bids will be given out by the end of this week, leaders of the clubs stating that the prospective candidates have already been voted upon. The initiation will take place later.
